

Antique Decorative Truncheon, Scottish, Beech, Edinburgh Police Baton, Victorian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25218

This is an antique decorative truncheon. A Scottish, beech Edinburgh police baton with handpainted detail, dating to the Victorian period, circa 1850.

- Fascinating decorative truncheon, likely carried by a sergeant
- Displays a desirable aged patina with lightly time worn appearance
- Ebonised beech, with natural colour to the tactile ring turned handle
- Delightful handpainted detail with the Edinburgh Coat of Arms
- Coat of Arms bears the Latin phrase Nisi Dominus Frustra - without the Lord, we act in vain
- Also accentuated with the district number in addition to the Victoria Regina cypher

This is a superb antique decorative truncheon, a well used and pleasingly handpainted memento of the Edinburgh police service in the Victorian period. Delivered ready to display.
