

Vintage Japanese Two-Panel Privacy Screen, Art Deco, Room Divider, Circa 1940

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25148

This is a captivating Japanese two-panel privacy screen, dating to the late Art Deco period, circa 1940. This elegant mahogany room divider exudes period charm, showcasing skilled craftsmanship and traditional motifs.

- Striking Art Deco-era Japanese design – A refined balance of functionality and decorative artistry
- Two-panel folding screen – Providing a versatile and mobile privacy solution
- Carved Mount Fuji pediment – A superb depiction of Japan's iconic peak, adding a sense of heritage and serenity
- Falcon relief detailing – Embellishing the edges with symbolism of strength and freedom
- Quality mahogany construction – With a rich, warm tone that has aged gracefully over time
 - Gently aged patina – Enhanced by time-worn textures, adding character and authenticity
 - Compact and practical – Ideal for use as a room divider, dressing screen, or decorative accent

DIMENSIONS

Max Width: 152cm (59.75")

Max Depth: 3cm (1.25")

Max Height: 180.5cm (71")

