

Antique Travel Suitcase, English, Leather Gentleman's Case, Edwardian, C.1910

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25239

This is a fine antique travel suitcase, an English gentleman's leather case, dating to the Edwardian period, circa 1910. A superb example with charming provenance and richly patinated character, and especially well suited to use as an accessory for period revival festival costumes.

- Quality leather construction, with a wonderfully aged russet tan finish and supple feel throughout
- Fascinating travel history, adorned with period label remnants from London, France, and the Hotel Cecil, Switzerland
- Personalised with the name of M.A. Steward, of the 3rd Bedfordshire Regiment, British Army, adding historic depth
- Richly toned leather throughout, highlighted by timeworn accents and brass fittings

Sturdy double-stitched leather handle, offering a tactile, comfortable grip for carrying

Lid secured with sliding claps with inset locks — keys absent

Clean interior, retaining a pair of original leather tether straps — ideal for storing garments securely

Well suited for use as a decorative prop or as a functional period travel accessory.

DIMENSIONS

Max Width: 61cm (24")

Max Depth: 21cm (8.25")

Max Height: 39cm (15.25")

LIST PRICE

£825.00

