

Antique Two Tier Dumb Waiter, English, Afternoon Tea, Jardiniere Stand, Georgian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25346

This is a fine antique two-tier dumb waiter. An English, mahogany serving or jardiniere stand, dating to the Georgian period, circa 1790. Of distinguished form and proportion, this fine example offers refined craftsmanship and a tasteful appearance – ideal for afternoon tea service or as a decorative plant stand.

- Georgian period dumb waiter, perfect for entertaining or interior display
- Crafted from select mahogany, displaying rich caramel tones and fine grain interest
- Rotating upper tier, ideal for practical serving or showcasing decorative pieces
- Graceful tapering supports, embellished with twist gadrooned bulb turnings
- Lower tier fixed in position, providing stable, generous display surface
- Standing upon a trio of broad cabriole legs, terminating in elegant snake feet
- The whole riding smoothly upon a set of neatly inset castors

This antique dumb waiter is a charming and versatile piece of Georgian furniture, and offers function and refinement across two tiers whilst adding period charm to the traditional or contemporary home alike. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for display.
