DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25454

This is a delightful antique log layer. An English, copper and brass fireside fuel tray, dating to the Victorian period, circa 1870. Showcasing distinctive Cornish copper craftsmanship, this fireside piece exudes character and warmth.

- Appealing Victorian fuel tray, ideal for storing logs or kindling by the hearth
- Crafted from quality, hand-beaten copper, glowing with rich amber hues
- Features a fascinating pinned brass handle, designed to rest upright or lowered
- Unusual bowed form adds sculptural interest and accommodates various log sizes
- Stands upon a charming quartet of paw feet, adding period flourish and stability
- Displays warm patination and gentle ageing in keeping with its 19th century origins
- A superb fireside companion, marrying decorative taste with functional intent

This antique copper log layer is a charming addition to any traditional fireplace setting, offering both visual appeal and practical fireside utility. A fine example of Victorian metalwork. Delivered ready for the home.
