

Antique Pharmaceutical Cork Compressor, Apothecary Aid, Door Knocker, Victorian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25473

This is an antique pharmaceutical cork compressor. An English, cast iron apothecary shop press dating to the early Victorian period, circa 1850. A rare survivor of 19th century pharmacy practice, offering both historical charm and decorative versatility.

- Crafted in quality cast iron with deep, consistent graphite tonality
- Originally used in Victorian apothecary shops for compressing corks
- Embellished with a scrolled leaf cast relief, adding decorative interest
- Mounting holes incorporated for counter top or wall display
- Could be imaginatively repurposed as a unique door knocker
- Presented in good antique order with appealing aged finish
- A wonderful example of early Victorian medical and industrial equipment

This Victorian apothecary cork compressor is an intriguing piece of 19th century pharmaceutical history, ideal for collectors of medical antiques, industrial curiosities, or distinctive interior accents. Delivered ready for the home or institution.

Search London Fine for #25473 , or scan the QR code for more photos and details

DIMENSIONS

Max Width: 7.5cm (3")
Max Depth: 25.5cm (10")
Max Height: 7cm (2.75")

LIST PRICE

£595.00

