

Antique Serving Platter, English Afternoon Tea Tray, Georgian Revival, Edwardian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25652

This is an antique serving platter. An English, mahogany afternoon tea tray crafted in Georgian revival taste, dating to the Edwardian period, circa 1910. A tactile and elegant tray, perfect for refined afternoon tea or evening cocktail service.

- Presented in the Georgian revival manner, showcasing timeless elegance
- Select mahogany stocks with fine grain interest and warm caramel hues
- Satinwood shell inlay to the centre offers decorative contrast and sophistication
- Pair of brass carry handles with bright golden tones and gentle patination
- Smooth, tactile surface with pleasing proportions ideal for service or display
- Dressed to the base with a protective baize in a fetching emerald green
- Perfect for afternoon tea gatherings, cocktail presentation, or sideboard display

A handsome and well-crafted antique serving tray, this Edwardian mahogany platter combines refined design with period charm, making it a distinguished addition to any drawing room, dining space, or collector's setting. Delivered ready for the home.
