DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25707

This is a fine pair of antique hall chairs. A Scottish, golden oak reception seat, dating to the late Regency period, circa 1830. Striking in form and colour, these fine chairs offer superb craftsmanship and elegant presence.

- Delightful Regency period pair, perfect for the reception hall or entranceway
- Scottish oak stocks display rich golden hues and superb grain interest, accentuated with wisps of medullary rays
- Displays a warm, golden caramel tone and lightly aged patina consistent with period character
- Distinctive arched crest rail rises proudly above the shaped back rest
- Adorned with a fascinating fretwork frieze, imparting Gothic revival overtones to the design
- Wide seat squab set at a comfortable height of 44cm (17.25"), offering practicality alongside aesthetic appeal
- Turned and tapered front legs provide elegance and strength to the stance
- Rear legs sweep gracefully outward, uniting balance and refinement
