

Antique Gentleman's Correspondence Case, English, Walnut, Writing Slope, Regency

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25679

This is an antique gentleman's correspondence case. An English, walnut and brass writing slope with leather skiver, dating to the Regency period, circa 1820. A refined, self-contained writing companion of excellent quality and enduring charm.

- Select walnut stocks present fine grain interest with a rich, inviting colour
 - Lid adorned with unmarked brass shield and inlaid brass straps, lending a distinguished aesthetic
 - Brass lock escutcheon to the fascia – in working order, with key present
 - Opens to reveal a navy blue leather skiver, attractively tooled and embossed
- Skiver formed in two parts, each lifting to reveal generous document compartments beneath
 - Front compartment secured by a pair of sliding clasps for peace of mind
 - Reverse of the skiver dressed with delicate blue netting, ideal for loose notes or envelopes
 - The rear compartment secured by an additional lock – key absent
 - Pen tray with removable cover sits neatly between a pair of brass-collared, glass ink wells
