

Antique Housekeeper's Carry, English Oak, Cutlery Tray, Trug, Work Box, Georgian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25734

This is an antique housekeeper's carry. An English, oak two-division cutlery tray, garden trug or work box, dating to the Georgian period, circa 1800. A charming estate-made piece with wonderful texture and enduring practicality.

- Select oak stocks present fine grain interest with wisps of medullar rays
- Displays a desirable aged patina, consistent with its period and use
- Warm caramel hues accentuate the dual-division format with gently tapered sides
- Central divider hosts a chamfered butler's grasp for comfortable and secure carrying
- Ideally suited for cutlery service, housekeeping tasks or organising small tools
- Also useful as a garden trug, crafting box or decorative tabletop organiser
- Dressed to the base with protective baize in a fetching wine red hue

A delightful Georgian oak cutlery tray, full of character and perfectly suited to modern practical or decorative roles. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
