Antique Townhouse Boot Scraper, English, Cast Iron, Shoe Pull, Late Victorian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 25841
This is an antique townhouse boot scraper. An English, cast iron shoe pull, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1890. A delightfully ornate and weighty entrance piece, offering both functional charm and striking decorative appeal.

- Of generous proportion, being ideal for grand entrances
- Quality cast iron with deep graphite tones and excellent form
- Demi-lune supports accentuated with pierced fretwork detail
- Supports adorned with cast finials, prominent in form for use as boot pulls

- Extra wide scraper bar useful for riding boots and shoes - 23cm (9'')
- Substantial weight of 14.8kg (32.6 lb) - ideal for stable and enduring use
- Pair of mounting holes to the base for secure placement at an entranceway
- Maker's mark to base for A. Kenrick & Sons, with serial number and registered design number
- Combines practical function with townhouse elegance, perfectly suited for period properties
