Antique Pole Screen, English, Adjustable Fireside Heat Reflector, William IV

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 26092
This is an antique pole screen. An English, rosewood and glass embroidered fireside heat reflector, dating to the William IV period, circa 1835.

• A fine example showcasing excellent craftsmanship and exceptional decorative interest
• Displays a desirable aged patina - in good order, with one small loss to the reverse
• Select stocks present fine grain interest and bask in deep russet hues
• Shield shape panel adorned with quality relief scallop shell motif

• Glass panel offers a clear, bright view of the embroidery within
• Needlepoint scene depicts a foliate wreath, with fine detail and wonderful colour
• Screen height adjustable through 65cm, ideal for managing heat or display
• Brass vernier to the reverse tightens securely upon the support to hold the panel in place

• Striking barley twist motif accentuates the support stand, with cup and collar forms
