

Antique Pole Screen, Rosewood, Needlepoint Tapestry, Fire Screen, Regency, 1820

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 18.6347

This is an antique pole screen. An English, Rosewood and needlepoint tapestry adjustable fire screen, dating to the Regency period, circa 1820.

- Superb Regency craftsmanship for the fireside
- Displays a desirable aged patina
- Select Rosewood shows fine grain interest and rich russet hues
- Quality needlepoint presented within clear, bright glass
- Stand topped with a small carved finial
- Sinuous scrolled carving to the frame and decorated with leaf motif
- Flower head carvings add an extra flourish
- The needlepoint tapestry in foliate wreath form with brightly coloured petals
- Adjustable screen height within a range of 71cm (28")
- Raised upon an eye-catching carved foliate stand with gently chamfered forms
- Long foliate baluster support with acanthus bulb terminus

Search London Fine for #18.6347 , or scan the QR code for more photos and details

DIMENSIONS

- Max Width: 36cm (14.25")
- Max Depth: 33cm (13")
- Max Height: 148cm (58.25")
- Screen Width: 45.5cm (18")
- Screen Height: 51cm (20")
- Screen Height Adjustment: 71cm (28")

