

Vintage Pocket Compass, English, Terrestrial, Marine, Navigation, Instrument

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 18.7346

This is a vintage pocket transit compass. An English, brass terrestrial or marine navigation instrument, dating to the mid 20th century, circa 1950.

- Superb weight and fascinating details
- Displaying a desirable aged patina and in good order
- Heavy brass case with light natural tarnish shows pleasing golden tones
- Glass dial and bright mirror plate in good original order
- Hinged lid complete with folding azimuth sight
 - Clear 60mm (2.25") dial displaying cardinal directions with red accentuated arrow needle
- Fully adjustable mechanism with two internal bubble levels, rotation by brass lever to rear
- Larger folding sight for observing sunlight with viewing window within the case lid
- Needle secured for transit with internal lever mechanism, activating upon lid closure
- Engraved table to rear displays the natural sine positions

Search London Fine for #18.7346 , or scan the QR code for more photos and details

DIMENSIONS

- Max Width: 7.5cm (3")
- Max Depth: 9cm (3.5")
- Max Height: 5cm (2")
- Face Diameter: 6cm (2.25")

