

Victorian Extending Dining Table, c.1890

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # LFA-1286 This is an antique, Victorian extending dining table dating to c.1890. The table is raised on substantial cabriole legs with very good quality, deep relief acanthus leaf knee carvings gently tapering down into talon and ball feet with hidden castors beneath. The top displays well with a polished finish that is consistent with the additional leaf in place and is edged with a gadrooned moulding above a plain frieze. The original winder locates through an aperture at one end and operates the smooth action of the extending mechanism. One additional leaf, with good colour match extends the table—turning the four seater into a six. A solid table delivered waxed, polished and ready for the home.
