

Trio Of Antique Shibayama Panels, Japanese Decorative Screen, Meiji Period, 1900

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 18.8232

This is a trio of antique Shibayama panels. A Japanese, lacquer decorative screen, dating to the Meiji period, circa 1900.

- Fascinating examples of late Victorian, Japanned decorative taste
- Displaying a desirable aged patina and in very good order
- Hardwood shows rich russet hues with inset lacquered panels
- Borders decorated with hand-painted flowerhead motif
- Each panel depicts birds visiting tree branches, realised in carved stone
- Feathers accentuated with eye-catching Mother of Pearl
- Decorated reverse scenes, with trees upon small hillocks, with decorative stone pieces
- Small inset maker's mark to the bottom corner, with characters upon a red 'stamp' ground
- Mounted with hanging wire to reverse for ease of display

This is a superb trio of antique Shibayama panels, presented in very good order commensurate with age. Striking interior decor, or enhancing any institution or retail space. Delivered waxed, polished and ready to showcase
