

Antique Campaign Bureau, Anglo Indian, Teak, Colonial Writing Desk, Victorian

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # 18.8568

This is an antique campaign bureau. An Anglo-Indian, teak and brass colonial writing desk, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1900.

- Rare and unusual example of campaign furniture, with a superb finish and well appointed
- Displaying a desirable aged patina and in very good order throughout
- Solid teak shows fine grain interest and warm caramel hues
- Brass corners and strapping presents bright golden tones
- Sectioned in two, with the upper fall front over a pair of wide drawers to the base
- Inlaid with gilt borders, the fall front dressed with a brass lined lock — key absent
- Generously sized writing surface with an arcaded gallery of storage compartments
- Two lopers emerge from the cabinet with small brass pulls to support the fall front
- Fascinating central door opens to reveal a sliding tray, the sides hosting two hidden compartments
- Drawers arranged as a narrow pair over two of full width, dressed with brass recessed handles
- Each drawer appointed with an inset lock — keys absent
